Project Overview

A. Project Description

The Bernard V. Fultz Meigs Center, operated by Rio Grande Community College, seeks to expand the physical structure of the building to support a fully functional medical training lab as well as renovate a current space to accommodate an integrated science lab. The current structure, built in 2008, sits on 7.53 acres of property owned by RGCC. The Fultz Center is currently 13,573 square feet. The medical lab expansion will add approximately 2,400 GSF to the physical building and will accommodate a new medical health laboratory as well as 2 to 4 new staff offices. The new health lab will support a maximum of 24 students, including a 4-bed simulation teaching area. The renovation area is approximately 900 NSF with electrical outlets, lighting and data drops currently in place. Water and sanitary will be needed for the lab, as well as a new lab fume hood. The science laboratory will accommodate a maximum of 24 students. Three water stations will be installed on the west-facing interior wall, with mobile lab stations for student work on the interior of the room.
