REDUCTION IN FORCE

13.01 UNFILLED POSITIONS: Positions which are vacant due to the resignation or retirement of an Employee will not be considered a reduction in force as it is referred to in the rest of this Article.

13.011 REVIEW PROCESS: When a position becomes vacant due to the retirement or resignation of an Employee, a Program Review Committee consisting of administration, and faculty chosen by faculty senate, will review faculty staffing needs and make recommendations to the Chief Academic Officer.

13.02 CONDITIONS FOR RIF: Reduction in Force (RIF), as determined by the College, may result from an underutilization of staff, program retrenchment, or financial exigency.

13.03 UNDERUTILIZATION OF STAFF/PROGRAM RETRENCHMENT: RIF due to underutilization of staff or program retrenchment will follow these guidelines:

13.031 PROCEDURES:

1. The Chief Academic Officer (CAO) will provide notification, within ten (10) days of the start of Fall term, including rationale, to the following parties in writing:
 - a. The SSEA President
 - b. The President of Faculty Senate
 - c. The chairperson of the Program Review Committee
2. Upon issuance of this notice the chairperson of the Program Review Committee shall convene a meeting to review the available relevant information, including from potentially affected faculty members, and prepare a report to address the issues and possible alternative actions.
3. CAO will provide a submission deadline for the report. This report will be submitted to the Chief Academic Officer. The CAO will include this report along with their recommendations regarding proposed actions to the President.
4. The President will meet with the Program Review Committee to review the recommendations and the report prior to final decisions being made.
5. Decisions on the disposition of the recommendations shall rest with the President.

13.032 NOTIFICATION: Individual faculty members who will be affected by the proposed reduction will be notified by the end of Fall Semester that their contract will be terminated at the conclusion of their individual contract unless financial exigency is declared.

13.04 DEFINITION OF FINANCIAL EXIGENCY: An imminent financial crisis which threatens the viable operation of the institution.

13.05 LAYOFF DUE TO FINANCIAL EXIGENCY: If a layoff is declared due to a financial exigency declared by the Board, the President shall notify in writing the faculty members affected and the SSEA at least thirty (30) calendar days prior to the effective date of said layoff. The College and SSEA will discuss possible ways of avoiding such layoff. Such discussions will not extend the effective date of layoff except by written agreement of both parties to this contract. The College shall first determine which non-personnel expenditures shall be curtailed before laying off faculty.

13.06 ORDER OF LAYOFF: In the program area(s) affected, providing that the remaining faculty can reasonably cover the remaining teaching assignments, full-time faculty with the least seniority shall be the first to be reassigned or laid off. Seniority is defined in Section 11.01. The College shall maintain a seniority listing of full-time faculty by program area.

13.08 RECALL: Recall may result because of an additional need for faculty, program reestablishment or the alleviation of financial exigency. During that two-year period, the faculty member shall be notified of any professional vacancy in the College in accordance with Section 12.02. Recall shall proceed according to the principles of seniority. Recalled faculty shall be reappointed at the same rank and employment status held at the time the Employee was laid off. If the laid-off faculty member is not recalled within the two-year period, the faculty member's appointment and seniority shall automatically be terminated.

13.09 HEALTH CARE: In the case of financial exigency, the College shall continue payment of the affected Employee's medical benefits for two (2) months following the effective date of the RIF. The Employee may continue all benefits provided by the College at the time of RIF in accordance with COBRA.

14.08 OVERLOAD: When there are classes which are not offered on the regular semester schedule, the College will designate the semester to which the units would be applied for overload purposes.

DISTANCE LEARNING

19.01 DISTANCE LEARNING: Except as provided in Article 19, distance learning courses and programs are treated in the same manner as those offered traditionally.

19.011 CLASS SIZE: Enrollment limits for distance learning sections shall be established at twenty-four (24), however, based upon course type, the Instructional Technology Committee, after consultation with the employee, Division Coordinators, and Dean, may recommend to the CAO alterations to this limit on a course-by-course basis.

19.02 DEFINITIONS:

19.021 DISTANCE LEARNING: Education that uses technologies, including a College supported Learning Management System, to deliver instruction to students who are separated from the instructor, either synchronously or asynchronously. Forms of distance learning include blended/hybrid, online, and video-enhanced models.

19.022 BLENDED/HYBRID MODEL: A delivery model in which 50% or more of the course is delivered online or through video tools or a combination thereof. An element of required face-to-face work between students and instructor is expected.

19.023 ONLINE MODEL: All learning activities are conducted online using the College's approved Learning Management System, and related tools, with no geographical limitations embedded in course delivery. Minimal obligation for test or laboratory proctoring may be necessary but coordinated via distance for student accessibility.

19.024 VIDEO ENHANCED MODEL: A delivery model in which 50% or more of the course is delivered synchronously through video technology between two or more locations.

19.025 DISTANCE PROGRAMS: Programs are considered "Distance Learning" programs when 50% or more of the courses required in the program are delivered through one or more of the identified distance learning models.

19.026 JOINT OWNERSHIP AGREEMENT: Arrangements in which the Employee is compensated with a supplemental contract for the development of a distance learning model course or program at the request of the College and use of this course can be extended beyond the original author. The College and the Employee "jointly" own the course through the duration of the Employee's contract or for a period of five (5) years, whichever is longer. At the end of this agreement, the Employee retains ownership of the course.

All credit-bearing distance learning courses shall be taught by Employee or adjunct faculty approved by the College.

19.032 An Employee may choose to participate in the development of distance education delivery models for courses and programs by:

- a. Developing and owning course content (Employee Owned Courses) as described in this article; or
- b. Working with the College in a Joint Ownership Arrangement.

Guidelines and Procedures for Academic Program Review

GUIDELINES AND PROCEDURES FOR ACADEMIC PROGRAM REVIEW THE OHIO BOARD OF REGENTS

The following expectations apply to all full-time and part-time instructors, including graduate teaching assistants and high school teachers who serve as adjunct faculty for dual enrollment courses:

1) For general education courses

- Faculty members teaching general education courses must hold a master's degree in the discipline or a master's degree and a cohesive set of at least 18 semester credit hours of graduate coursework relevant to the discipline.
- Individuals who are making substantial progress toward meeting the faculty credentialing requirements and who are mentored by a faculty member who does meet the minimum credentialing requirements may serve as instructors during their educational programs. Examples of such individuals include graduate teaching assistants (GTAs), adjunct faculty members and dual enrollment faculty members.

2) For courses other than general education courses

- Faculty members must hold a terminal degree or a degree at least one level above the degree level in which they are teaching:
 - At least a bachelor's degree if teaching in an associate degree program
 - At least a master's degree if teaching in a bachelor's degree programs
 - A terminal degree if teaching in a graduate program
- Individuals who are making substantial progress toward meeting the faculty credentialing requirements and who are mentored by a faculty member who does meet the minimum credentialing requirements may serve as instructors during their educational programs. Examples of such individuals include graduate teaching assistants (GTAs) or adjunct faculty members who are working toward meeting the faculty credentialing requirements.
- Faculty members teaching technically- or practice-oriented courses must have practical experience in the field and hold current licenses and/or certifications, as applicable.
- For programs involving clinical faculty (e.g., student teaching supervisors, clinical practicum supervisors), the credentials and involvement of clinical faculty are described and meet applicable professional standards for the delivery of the educational experiences.

3) The following expectations apply to all faculty members

- Faculty members must hold a degree from a regionally or nationally accredited institution recognized by the U.S. Department of Education or the Council for Higher Education Accreditation or equivalent as verified by a member of the National Associations of Credential Evaluation Services.
- Where professional accreditation or licensing standards for faculty exceed these standards, faculty members are expected to meet the higher standards.
- Faculty members must show evidence of continuing professional development in the discipline.
- Faculty members who teach online courses must be prepared for teaching in an online environment.
- Faculty members within a program should have received their degrees from a variety of institutions. Faculty members who received their degrees from a single institution should not constitute the majority of the program's faculty.

4) Exceptions

Certain individuals may be qualified to teach College-level courses yet not meet the faculty qualification criteria presented here. In such circumstances, it is the responsibility of each institution's chief academic officer to make decisions in consultation with program faculty regarding exceptions and to maintain a record of the justification of those exceptions. Documentation that could be used to support exceptions can include, but is not limited to: publications, licensure, certification, evidence of years of professional experience and/or professional reputation. Examples of individuals meriting an exception and institutional justification would include:

- A faculty member who has extraordinary practical or tested experience in a field that has been validated through publication and/or public recognition (such as in creative writing, painting, music, foreign language, or other areas of performance).
- Faculty members in fields where a degree one level above the degree that students are seeking is not be widely available (e.g., for instructors of certain technically-, professionally-, or occupationally-related courses). In those instances, the Chief Academic Officer, in collaboration with the faculty, will determine appropriate qualifications and apply them consistently.
- Faculty members who possess the appropriate credential in their discipline but who teach in related disciplines; for example, engineering faculty members teaching math or business faculty members teaching economics.

5) Responsibility for determining faculty qualifications

Chief academic officers are ultimately responsible for ensuring the following: a) that faculty credentialing requirements are met; b) that instructors who are working toward meeting credentialing requirements are appropriately mentored and making substantial progress in their coursework; c) that exceptions to the requirements are carefully considered and justified; and d) that exceptions are reserved for a small number of uniquely qualified individuals.

As noted in various sections of the third edition of the Handbook of Accreditation, in order to be responsive to rapid change, the Handbook was structured so that it could be quickly modified and updated through print replacement sections and through new and improved Web-based materials. The following information is intended to provide additional guidance to higher education organizations and to peer reviewers in determining and evaluating faculty qualifications in various higher education contexts. The guidance offered here serves to illuminate the Criteria for Accreditation and Core Components that speak to the importance of higher education organizations employing a qualified faculty for the varied and essential roles faculty members play.

The Commission's Handbook states that a "qualified faculty" consists of "people who by formal education and tested experience know what students must learn." It goes on to say that such faculties "create the curricular pathways through which students gain the competencies and skills they need." (Core Component 3b)

Knowing What Students Must Learn

- Within a specific discipline or field of study, "knowing what students must learn" refers to a faculty member's ability to understand and convey the essentials of the discipline that a student should master at various course and program levels. Qualified faculty are able to engage professionally with colleagues in determining the specific, stated learning objectives for all graduates of a specific program, as well as the full scope of the knowledge, skills, and dispositions appropriate to the degree awarded.
- In addition to knowing what students should learn within specific disciplines, qualified faculty also know the broad learning objectives of the College or university for all of its students. Criterion 4 states that an organization should create an academic environment that promotes "inquiry, creativity, practice, and social responsibility in ways consistent with its mission," The Commission expects that, through the higher education curricula that faculty develop, students gain "a breadth of knowledge and skills and the exercise of intellectual inquiry." Further, qualified faculty are able to determine "the usefulness of curricula to students who live and work in a global, diverse, and technological society." (Core Components 4b and 4c.)
- Qualified faculty not only know what students should learn but whether and how much they learn, since an organization should be able to provide "evidence of student learning and teaching effectiveness that demonstrates it is fulfilling its educational mission." (Criterion Three)

Using Credentials or Degrees Earned as a Basic for Determining Qualified Faculty

- Faculty credentials generally refer to the degrees faculty have earned at certain levels that provide a foundation for knowing what students should learn in a specific discipline or field. Over the years, some hallmarks and common expectations for faculty credentials have emerged within the higher education community, such as:

- Faculty teaching in higher education organizations should have completed a significant program of study in the discipline they will teach and/or for which they will develop curricula, with substantial coursework at least one level above that of the courses being taught or developed. Further, it is assumed that successful completion of a coherent degree better prepares a person than an unstructured collection of credit courses;
- Faculty teaching in undergraduate programs should hold a degree at least one level above that of the program in which they are teaching, and those teaching general education courses typically hold a master's degree or higher and should have completed substantial graduate coursework in the discipline of those courses;
- Faculty teaching in graduate programs typically hold the terminal degree determined by the discipline;
- Faculty overseeing doctoral education should know how to conduct research appropriate to the program and degree.

These continue to be basic expectations adhered to by many Colleges and universities and, therefore, most Colleges and universities will integrate most of them into their faculty handbooks and hiring policies.

- Qualified faculty are identified in part by credentials, but there are limitations to considering only the degrees earned. For example,
 - Besides credentials, other vital attributes are necessary to qualify someone to teach, such as being able to design curricula, to develop and implement effective pedagogy, and to appreciate the breadth of knowledge so vital in quality undergraduate and graduate education;
 - Knowledge of a specific discipline as indicated by the credential is not all that is required, since faculty carry other significant responsibilities, such as conducting research, advising students, participating in co-curricular activities, and contributing to shared governance;
 - An earned degree does not necessarily attest to a faculty member's ongoing professional development in the field. Knowing what students should know is dependent upon the discovery of new knowledge and "keeping up in the field";
 - Academic disciplines, degree programs, and curricula are not static. Because of changing academic, societal and workforce needs, Colleges and universities are developing interdisciplinary and other non-traditional programs that require faculty to think beyond their own disciplines and traditional academic programs to determine what students should know and to design curricula accordingly;

- In some cases, such as in practice-oriented disciplines or programs, tested experience in the field may be needed as much or more than formal educational preparation at a prescribed level in determining what students should know to practice.

Using "Tested Experience" as a Basis for Determining Qualified Faculty

- The value of using tested experience to determine faculty qualifications is largely dependent upon the relevance of the experience both to the degree level and to the specific content of the course(s) for which the faculty member is responsible. Tested experience implies that some objective measure ensures that the individual's knowledge and expertise are sufficient for determining what students must learn and have learned. For example:
 - A faculty member teaching baccalaureate-level courses in human resources or business ethics might not have a degree in business, but can provide evidence of effective work as a practicing labor relations attorney;
 - A faculty member who teaches courses for a pre-associate information technology, may not possess a graduate degree, but this person might have the industry certification and years of experience successfully working in the field;
 - A faculty member teaching the clinical courses in a master's program in education might not have a doctorate in education but, instead, might have documented recognition of excellence in teaching;
 - A faculty member teaching creative writing, painting, or music may have had his expertise, ability, and talent validated through publication or through wide critical and public acclaim;
 - A faculty member teaching conversational courses in a Native American or foreign language may demonstrate his qualification through formal recognition of competence by tribal elders or through a nationally recognized rating of proficiency in foreign language.

Following Good Practices in Determining Qualified Faculty

- The Commission expects that an "organization's resource base supports its educational programs and its plans for maintaining and strengthening their quality in the future." This requires that organizations have, and plan for, a sufficient number of qualified faculty to ensure educational quality. While not all faculty will possess the credentials that are regarded as "hallmarks," the overall mix of the faculty, within a given program and/or organization, should establish a foundation for maintaining and strengthening educational quality Core Component 2b. In short, Colleges and universities will value in each individual member credentials and/or experience, but the most important consideration is whether all of the members of the faculty together represent the breadth of skills, talents, and knowledge needed by the institution and the program.

- Higher education organizations typically establish and periodically review the minimum qualifications and expectations of faculty teaching in different disciplines and at different levels. Policies and practices are codified and widely shared to ensure consistency and diligence in any review of qualifications for making hiring, tenure, and promotion decisions. An organization's policies should make clear how educational preparation and professional experience are validated and weighed in determining faculty qualifications. While policies might differ among Colleges, they should be clearly tied to how each institution determines "who by formal education and tested experience knows what students must learn.
- Generally, the same guidelines and principles should be used for employing part-time, adjunct, temporary, and/or non-tenure track faculty as are used in employing full-time tenure-track or tenured faculty, whose primary responsibility is teaching. Although some institutions place a heavy reliance on adjunct faculty, or give graduate teaching assistants the predominant responsibility for instruction in many course sections, an organization committed to effective teaching and learning in all courses and programs will be able to demonstrate consistent procedures and careful consideration of qualifications for all instructional faculty.
- A College or university should assist a productive member of the faculty in implementing a useful program of professional development. For a faculty member with minimal credentials but considerable tested experience, that program might well involve completion of degrees, particularly graduate degrees, appropriate to that faculty member's work. As U.S. higher education addresses the call for the academy to provide education that prepares graduates for demands of the workplace, it is possible that acceptable professional development might include internships or other opportunities to practice in the profession.

The Commission does not dictate hiring standards to be applied to each member of the faculty. In providing this guidance, the Commission reflects its long-standing understanding that it is the responsibility of a College or university to establish and implement its own policies regarding faculty qualifications. The Commission's concern is about the overall capacity of the faculty to achieve the educational goals of the institution, and to do that, the faculty must be made up of "people who by formal education and tested experience know what students must learn."
