10:05-10:10 Chair Scott Neely

Quorum was established. There were 12 Commissioners present. Both meeting minutes were approved by Commissioner Randy Malcolm Thomas and seconded by Rep. Riordan McClain.

IV. Ohio House of Representatives

10:10 – 10:45 State Representative White

Commissioner Neely introduced State Representative White. She is in her second term as Chair of the Children and Human Services Committee, and she represents House District 36, which includes Kettering, Lorain, Oakland, Belmont, Montgomery County in Dayton. Rep. White discussed House Bill 257 and House Bill 7 from the last General Assembly. Rep. White discussed her passion for children and families as well as her work on important legislation. House Bill 257 was signed into law that allows virtual meetings for public bodies, which is our understanding of that law. She believes that it will not go into effect until April 2025, and she will keep it on her radar.

Rep. White stated the fact that you are all working together to elevate, recognize, and celebrate fathers, and the important and critical roles that play in not only in our children's lives and families, but also in the communities. Rep. White said you probably know these numbers, but every time she reads them, when fathers are not engaged in the family, they are four times at a greater risk of poverty, seven times more likely to be pregnant as a teen, more likely to face abuse and neglect, and two times the risk of infant mortality. She discussed the importance of fathers in families and in communities, highlighting the challenges faced by families without engaged fathers.

Rep. White shared her experiences in healthcare, developmental disability, and politics, emphasizing the need to address poverty and support families. She also discussed her work on House Bill 7, which aimed to provide Medicaid coverage for Doulas to improve infant and maternal mortality rates. Rep. White emphasized the need for a holistic approach to address poverty and improve the lives of families, and she encouraged the audience to share their thoughts on the biggest needs that aren't being addressed.

Rep. White discussed the progress and future plans of the Department of Children and Youth, which was created to streamline services and improve access to care for children. She highlighted the importance of early childhood mental health, the need for better coordination between various state agencies, and the goal of reducing infant mortality and improving kindergarten readiness. Also emphasized the need for more fathers to be engaged in early childhood and early learning, and the importance of community and family networks in supporting families. Rep. White mentioned the Dolly Parton Imagination Library and the need for more people to say “yes” to fostering children due to the high cost of childcare. Rep. White concluded by stating that the department's main goal is to help children and families thrive.

V. Montgomery County Strategic Initiative
10:45 – 11:30	Dr. Michael Newsom, Executive Director

Commissioner Neely introduced Dr. Michael Newsom, who is the Executive Director at Montgomery County Strategic Initiatives located in Dayton, Ohio. Dr. Newsome discussed the needs of fathers in Ohio, emphasizing the importance of family and community. He mentioned the Children's Trust Fund Board and their work on positive parenting, and the need for additional funding for programs that engage fathers in prisons. Dr. Newsom also highlighted the importance of addressing infant mortality, safe sleep, smoking cessation, and financial stability. He mentioned a pilot program with early childhood research centers and the need for more funding to support programs in state prisons. Dr. Newsom also discussed the issue of unequal treatment of parents in the court system, which he believes hinders the effectiveness of fatherhood programs. He concluded by stating that until the root cause of unequal treatment is addressed, these programs will not be able to reach their full potential.

The discussion focused on strategies to support fathers, particularly those facing poverty and legal challenges. Dr. Newsom emphasizes the need to educate professionals about poverty and provide evidence-based curriculums for those in prison or involved with children's services. The group discusses the importance of legal representation for fathers in court proceedings and the challenges fathers face in maintaining relationships with their children due to financial constraints. They also highlight the need for support services for young fathers released from juvenile custody and suggest engaging reentry coalitions to assist these fathers. The participants agree on the importance of educating judges and attorneys about fatherhood issues through judicial conferences and continuing education programs.

The meeting involved discussions about the child support system, its evolution, and its role in connecting with families and fathers. Dr. Newsom emphasized the importance of the child support system as a resource for connecting with families, especially fathers. He also mentioned the availability of federal financial participation for employment and training services for non-custodial parents. Montgomery County Staff, who deal with fathers daily, encouraged continued efforts to keep fathers connected with their children. Dr. Newsom also suggested that the child support system could be a conduit for more community programs. The conversation ended with Dr. Newsom presenting information about their program and how the OCF SEE Fathers Program has enhanced their work.

Dr. Newsom discussed the importance of community outreach and engagement in their fatherhood initiative, which started in 2010. He emphasized the need to make services accessible and visible to all, particularly fathers who may face unique challenges within the system. He also highlighted the importance of collaboration with local agencies and the need to hold the system accountable. He mentioned their work in prisons, high schools, and churches, and the need to educate the public about the consequences of having children out of wedlock. Dr. Newsom also stressed the importance of financial support for children and the need for legal representation in court. He concluded by expressing his skepticism about changing hearts and minds, suggesting a more practical approach.

Dr. Newsom discussed the importance of engagement in helping fathers and their children. He emphasized the need for fathers to be involved in their children's lives, even if they have made mistakes in the past. He also mentioned the SEE Father's Grant, which helps with various expenses such as license reinstatement fees and transportation costs. He highlighted the role of the Montgomery County office of reentry in providing holistic services, and he stressed the need for fathers to take responsibility for their actions and to engage with their children, rather than being disengaged or ignored. He concluded by noting the challenges of working in a female-dominated industry, but he emphasized that it doesn't mean it's anti-male.

Dr. Newsom discussed the organization's annual Fatherhood Banquet and other events aimed at engaging fathers and their families. He highlighted the Produce Perks program, which sends fathers two boxes of fruits and vegetables per month, and the Fatherhood Club, which meets monthly for discussions and activities. The Montgomery County Strategic Initiative will have an upcoming Lego event, the Dayton Dragons game, and the Story Chain program, which involves reading books to children in institutions. He emphasized the importance of education and engagement in helping fathers overcome barriers and improve their self-esteem. Dr. Newsom also provided statistics on the organization's current grant cycle, highlighting the challenges faced by the fathers they serve.

Montgomery County has served 170 fathers during the current grant cycle. They served 170 fathers previously, which is pretty good too. There is a mix as far as race: 48% of fathers are black and 47% of fathers are white. There are 42% of fathers who have never been married and only 12% are currently married. Some fathers live in shelters, halfway houses, and treatment centers. 18% of fathers are incarcerated in prison, and 85% of fathers have a felony conviction. That gives you an idea that there must be more fathers who need holistic services, especially around reentry. 47% have none of their children living with them. 41% of fathers have children with only one woman.

70% of fathers don't have legal or physical custody of their children. These statistics highlight the fact that these guys are starting from behind. Montgomery County staff try to level the playing field by not only putting the programs out there for fathers to attend, but help fathers stay engaged, and to help them where they are.

Dr. Newsom emphasized the importance of making people feel welcome and valued, particularly in the context of fatherhood programs. Fathers need easy access to these programs and the lack of obligations associated with them. The challenges of changing the cultural mindset within the judiciary, particularly in relation to equal parenting. He suggested that legislative changes might be necessary to achieve equality in the court system. He also mentioned ongoing efforts to address these issues, including working with local judges and representatives.

Dr. Newsom discussed the county's fatherhood mobilization efforts and the need for stronger relationships between education and social services. He also mentioned the county's involvement in Morrow County, which previously lacked a program. He expressed a desire to strengthen relationships with local school districts, particularly superintendents.

Joshua Counciller clarified the four specific purposes under TANF, explaining that funding can be used for one or more of these purposes. He further explained that performance-based bonuses can be used to cover fees not typically covered by TANF. The team agreed to further discuss these points to better understand how TANF works and how it can be used to empower the community.

TANF 4 Purposes:

BMV Licenses are not allowed

#2 = Re-instatement

#3 = Out of Wedlock pregnancies

#4 = Strengthening fathers

Question:

Commissioner White asked, "What's your relationship with the schools and PTO meetings?"

Response: Dr. Newsom said they attend some of them throughout the year.
