Anatomical Structures and Soft Contact Lenses

Author: Debra Bennett, ABOC, NCLE-AC

2 hours NCLE approved; Requesting Ohio SCD approval

Course Description

An excellent eye care professional (ECP) has knowledge of the anatomy of the human eye and shares this knowledge with patients. The course lays a strong foundation by presenting a detailed overview of transparent and non-transparent structures, the refractive states of the eye, and other ocular functions. Building upon that foundation is the advanced discussion of anatomical features that can enhance or contraindicate the use of soft contact lenses, and how to adjust for these anatomical features.

Course Objectives

Upon completing this course, ECP's will be able to:

- Identify facial structures that benefit or contraindicate soft contact lens use
- Identify certain dysmorphic conditions that affect soft contact lens wear
- Recognize contraindications that anatomy imposes
- Detect which infections are anatomically based and which relate to soft lenses
- Compare patterns and stains to identify causes and suggest corrections of problems

VISION PROFESSIONALS' BOARD – MEETING 11/16/23

ATTORNEY GENERAL REPORT – Crystal Richie, Principal AAG

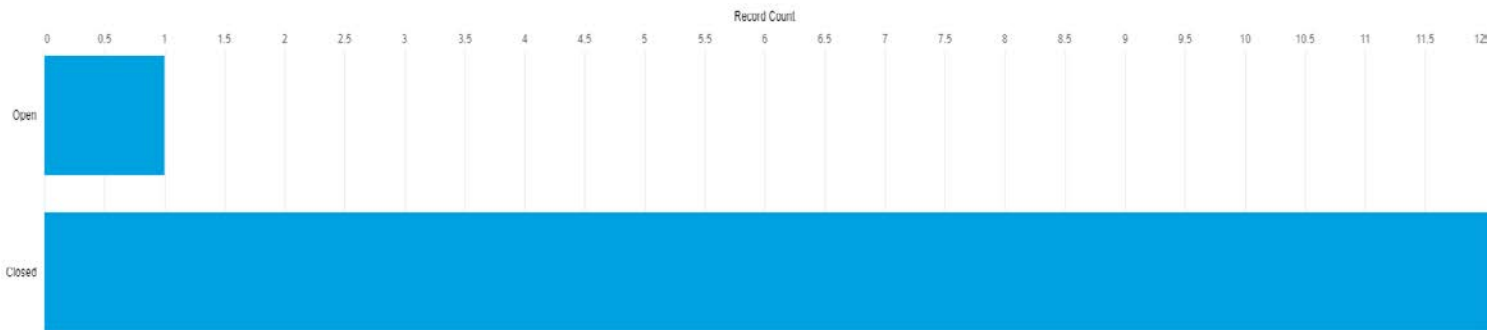

- There is no pending litigation involving the Vision Professionals' Board.
- Since the last Board Meeting, no new cases have been filed naming the Vision Professionals' Board as a party.
- Currently there are no active administrative matters. (O.R.C. Chapter 119)
- On 11/8/23 I participated in a Zoom Call organized by Lisa Finnell – Executive Director of ARBO and AJ Gohill with the Washington DC branch of the organization. There were several attorneys in attendance from other states – Colorado, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, North Carolina, Maine, etc. We had a lively discussion about issues our clients face. Several attorneys mentioned issues with telehealth and continuing education requirements. In Vermont, there are scope of practice issues between optometrists and ophthalmologists. We discussed the benefits of getting together quarterly via Zoom, which we hope to begin in the new year.
